The mother tested positive for opioids; however, the baby's results came back negative. The baby was placed in the NICU because the mother did not receive prenatal care throughout the pregnancy. There's no information indicating that the child was affected by the mother's drug use. The mother never qualified for Medicaid and was denied during the beginning of her pregnancy. When the mother was able to get insurance, it was hard for her to find an OB doctor because she was already late in her pregnancy (28 weeks or further). The mother did receive an ultrasound during that time frame. The mother admitted to using hydrocodone that was prescribed to her two years ago, during her pregnancy for pain. The mother does have a diagnosis of ██████████. On 1/14/20, the baby passed away for unknown reasons. Prior to the baby being placed in the NICU, she had no signs of a birth defect or withdrawal symptoms. The mother appeared to be bonding appropriately with the baby before her passing.

She was given one dose of Clonazepam by the mother and she was "fine". Later that night ██████████ and the sister had went to bed around 11:45pm. Throughout the night ██████████ continued to suffer from multiple seizures, but the 15 year old sister in the home, did not notify the parents because she is left in charge and knows what to do whenever things like this happens during the night. The sister just watched ██████████ have seizures and then she was "fine". She shared a room with her 15 year old sister and had seizures regularly since the age of 4 year old. On the morning of 01/19/2020, the sister had gotten up around 10:30am and left to the bedroom to go into the living room, and ██████████ was still breathing in bed. The mother asked "where's ██████████" and the sister said she was still sleeping. The mother and sister went into the bedroom and found ██████████ unresponsive with blue lips around 11am. EMT was notified and fire rescue arrived at the home 12:14pm. ██████████ was transported to UF Health Jacksonville, where she was then pronounced deceased at 12:51pm. ██████████ had only one or two seizures, she was to take her medication of Clonazepam. If she had an episode of where she would have a lot of seizures, she was not to receive the medication due to possibly having an overdose and because the medication was "highly addicting". It is believed that ██████████ passed away due to her seizure disorder, and there were no signs of foul play.

It is recommended that he has someone there with him during this practice because he has the potential of passing out. ██████ practiced diving and holding his breath all the time, and he was aware of the risk of practicing. ██████ was by himself during his death. ██████ sister was there with him while he was practicing earlier. ██████ did it one time and held his breath for two minutes. About five minutes later, ██████ said that he was going to do it again. ██████ held his breath and went under the water. While ██████ was under the water, the sister realized her phone was on 1 percent. She went inside and planned to grab her phone charger, but she received a Facetime call and never went back out to the pool. ██████ passed out under water and was underneath the water for 30 minutes. He never came back up. Thirty minutes later, ██████ sister and his friend found ██████. The sister and friend were home alone with ██████ at the time of his death. ██████ mother and stepfather were not at home at the time of the incident because they were at the store for approximately 50 minutes. ██████ mother and stepfather knew that he was practicing diving with the sister when they went to the store. The mother and step-father pulled into the driveway twenty seconds after ██████ sister and friend found that he was dead. The sister called 911 for help. The parents attempted to do CPR until authorities responded to the home. The mother and stepfather were shocked and in disbelief. It "hit them very hard." ██████ did not go to the hospital. The medical examiner ruled ██████ death as an accidental drowning. The explanation for the incident seemed to be consistent with ██████ death. There were no signs of abuse or neglect.

An MRI was conducted that revealed ██████████ had a black spot on his brain the size of a golf ball due to lack of oxygen. ██████████ was in and out of the hospital since birth. At one point, the mother and father missed the nasal tube at the hospital where they removed 70 cc of milk from the lungs. At that point, doctors gave ██████████ a g-tube and put him on a ventilator. At the hospital ██████████ underwent cooling and heating treatments to attempt to reactivate the brain. At one point, while using the ventilator, ██████████ began to breath independently. The mother and father agreed, they would remove the ventilator and keep him off the ventilator. ██████████ survived without the ventilator for a month, and he passed of natural causes. The father was holding ██████████ while he passed away, making gurgling noise. When a secondary MRI was performed, the majority of ██████████ brain was black aside from the brain stem due to lack of oxygen. Doctors conducted an autopsy, the death certificate reflects that ██████████ passed of natural causes. The mother and father have since had two twin boys, and are currently separated as of April 2020.
