

Resource Guide for Suicide Loss Survivors

Florida and National Resources

Suicide takes the lives of about 47,000 Americans each year. Every one of these deaths reverberates through families, workplaces, schools and universities, religious organizations, and other social networks. Those left behind after the suicide of a family member, friend, or colleague are referred to as “loss survivors.” Navigating the loss of a loved one by suicide can be a struggle, but you are not alone in this. Other loss survivors share your experience and have contributed to creating resources to help you cope and move forward in your life.

Support Groups

(in person and online)

Loss survivor support groups give individuals a safe environment to listen, grieve, and share experiences with others in similar situations. Most suicide loss survivor support groups are facilitated by a fellow loss survivor. For some, involvement in a support group may be a short-term need, while for others the need may be ongoing. Involvement in a support group can begin soon after the suicide of a loved one or long after the suicide has occurred. Individuals who are experiencing profound grief may also require individual counseling.

Support Organizations

These organizations provide support for survivors in a variety of ways, including providing information and hosting awareness events and activities.

The Dougy Center for Grieving Children & Families

<http://www.dougy.org>

Through their National Center for Grieving Children and Families, the Dougy Center provides support and training locally, nationally, and internationally to individuals and organizations seeking to assist children in grief.

Friends For Survival, Inc.

<http://www.friendsforsurvival.org>

A national nonprofit organization that provides peer support services to comfort those in grief, encourages healing and growth, fosters the development of skills to cope with a loss, and educates the community about the impact of suicide. Staff and volunteers have been directly impacted by a suicide death.

Heartbeat: Grief Support Following Suicide

<http://www.heartbeatsurvivorsaftersuicide.org>

This is a peer support group offering empathy, encouragement, and direction following the suicide of a loved one.

Link Counseling Center's National Resource Center

<https://www.thelink.org/>

The center's goal is to provide suicide-related community education in the areas of prevention, intervention, and aftercare, as well as healing support services for families, youth, and those affected by the psychological trauma of suicide.

Sibling Survivors

<http://www.siblingsurvivors.com>

This website provides online resources for sibling suicide survivors.

Support Organizations

Pensacola Survivors, Inc.

<https://www.pensacolasurvivors.org/>

A nonprofit organization in the Panhandle of Florida that provides support and resources to suicide attempt survivors, individuals with mental health concerns, and community members who have lost someone to suicide. Pensacola Survivors serves community members in Escambia and Santa Rosa counties.

Compassionate Friends

<http://www.compassionatefriends.com>

A national nonprofit organization that assists families toward the positive resolution of grief following the death of a child of any age. There is also information provided to help others be supportive of loss survivors.

Channeling Grief into Policy Change: Survivor Advocacy for Injury Prevention

<http://www.traumaf.org/images/IPNweb.pdf>

Personal stories of survivor advocacy for injury prevention are included as well as information on how to become a suicide prevention advocate.

American Foundation for Suicide Prevention

<https://afsp.org/our-work/advocacy/>

AFSP works to create ways for survivors of suicide to transform their grief into positive action to prevent future tragedies. This resource list and other publications for survivors are available in the SPRC Online Library at <http://library.sprc.org>.

Alliance of Hope for Suicide Survivors

<http://www.allianceofhope.org/>

This website provides information sheets about suicide loss and hosts a blog and community forum. Through the forum, survivors can contact others with similar losses, share their stories, and discuss healing from a loss by suicide. The forum operates like a 24/7 support group with a team of trained moderators and a mental health clinician who contributes regularly.

Parents of Suicides and Friends & Families of Suicides (POS-FFOS)

<http://www.pos-ffos.com/>

This website hosts a public message board called Suicide Grief Support Forum, a listserv for parents, a separate listserv for others, and an online chat room for an international community of survivors of suicide loss.

Suicide Prevention Organizations with Information for Survivors

American Association of Suicidology (AAS)

<http://www.suicidology.org>

AAS addresses many aspects of suicide prevention, intervention, and survivor support. Its website has a section called “Suicide Loss Survivors” (<http://www.suicidology.org/suicide-survivors/suicide-loss-survivors>), which includes newsletter articles, personal stories, and a directory of support groups for survivors of suicide loss. There is also a section for clinicians who have lost a client and/or family member to suicide. AAS, in collaboration with AFSP (below), organizes the one-day Healing After Suicide conference to provide survivors with educational tools and resources to help cope with their personal grief; assists mental health providers and other caregivers in understanding the needs of survivors; and provides assistance to leaders of existing support groups and participants who want to establish new support groups.

American Foundation for Suicide Prevention (AFSP)

<http://www.afsp.org>

AFSP provides a wide variety of services related to suicide prevention and coping with suicide. Its website has a section called “I've Lost Someone” (<https://afsp.org/live-lost-someone>), which offers information for survivors, as well as personal stories and a directory of support groups for survivors of suicide loss. AFSP provides a training program for support group facilitators and a survivor outreach program through which volunteer survivors listen, show support, and provide information about local resources to newly bereaved survivors. AFSP also sponsors the International Survivors of Suicide Day, an event where the survivor community comes together for support and healing.

Suicide Awareness Voices of Education (SAVE)

<http://www.save.org>

SAVE is an organization that focuses on public awareness and education about suicide and suicide prevention. Its website has a section for suicide loss survivors called “Coping with Loss” (<https://save.org/find-help/coping-with-loss/>), which contains information sheets, personal stories, a directory of support groups for survivors of suicide loss, and an extensive resources list.

Suicide Prevention Resource Center (SPRC)

<http://www.sprc.org>

SPRC provides information, training, and technical assistance related to suicide and suicide prevention. Its online library has a large number of materials for survivors of suicide loss at <https://sprc.org/online-library/>. Select Survivors of Suicide Loss under Populations on the left-hand side and click "Apply" underneath the filters.

Resources for Survivor Support Groups and Programs

HEARTBEAT: Grief Support Following Suicide

<http://heartbeatsurvivorsaftersuicide.org/>

This organization has local support group chapters for survivors of suicide loss in Colorado and other states. The website provides information sheets for survivors and a leader's guide on how to start a new support group for survivors of suicide loss chapter of HEARTBEAT.

Preventing Suicide: How to Start a Survivors' Group

<https://apps.who.int/iris/handle/10665/44801>

This manual discusses the needs of suicide survivors and the ways in which self-help groups can help. It also provides guidance on how to establish and run a survivors' support group.

Support Group Facilitation Training

<http://www.afsp.org/facilitatortraining>

AFSP sells a 95-page guide to effective support group facilitation titled Facilitating Suicide Bereavement Support Groups: A Self-Study Manual, along with a 90-minute companion DVD. AFSP also offers a two-day training program that uses lecture, interactive discussion, and role-playing to prepare participants to create and facilitate a survivor support group. The training is offered throughout the year across the United States.

The Basics: Facilitating a Suicide Survivors Support Group

https://www.mirecc.va.gov/visn19/postvention/docs/Support_Group_Facilitator_Guide.pdf

This guide provides information on survivor issues and starting and facilitating a survivor support group, handouts and resources that can be used by group facilitators, and reflections from a survivor's perspective.
